Regarding the Sink: Where, Oh Where, Did Waters Go? By Kate Klise

Geyser Creek Middle School's cafeteria sink is clogged, and the smell is . . . well, P-U-trid. Of course, the savvy students in the sixth-grade class know just who can create a fabuloso new sink--Florence Waters, who designed the school's OTT (over-the-top) water fountain. But the famous fountain designer (and, more important, their good friend) has gone missing! Undeterred, these kids follow their hearts and noses all the way to China to find Florence . . . and sniff out a few stinkers along the way.

Told in letters, newspaper articles, and BEAN-mails, this story is guaranteed to make you laugh until beans fly out your nose!

Editorial Review

From School Library Journal

Grade 4-6—In this sequel to Regarding the Fountain (HarperCollins, 1998), Florence Waters, the artist who designed the school fountain, is needed to design a new cafeteria sink, but she is missing. Finding her becomes the focus of the sixth-grade class from Geyser Creek Middle School in Missouri. A U.S. Senator, the principal's rich mother, Chinese Sinkiang Blinking Spotted Suckerfish, big business, and beans all play a role in this mystery that eventually leads to a class trip to China. The story is conveyed through letters, student drawings and poems, advertisements, e-mails, school assignments, facsimiles, stock reports, newspaper articles, a variety of other kinds of documents, and cartoons. Each page is designed to look like the kind of document it represents. Piecing the story and clues together is satisfying. Introduce this book to savvy readers who are ready for the jump to a clever, unconventional reading experience.—Jean Gaffney, Dayton and Montgomery County Public Library, Miamisburg, OH

Gr. 3-5. The cast, dynamic format, and some of the same plot elements that appeared in the Klise sisters' Regarding the Fountain (1998) enjoy a reprise here. This time, Geyser Creek Middle School's principal isn't pleased with the sixth-grade's enthusiasm for reconnecting with fountain-designer Florence Waters to help resolve the school's need for a cafeteria sink. While the kids attempt to contact Ms. Waters and grow increasingly concerned about her silence, the reader has an opportunity to sift through the newspaper accounts about evil Senator MOM and other stories that have a bearing on Ms. Waters. The subplot concerning the principal's e-mail attempts to get his staff to cease communication^B via nonelectronic means will amuse adults more than kids, but the array of nicely designed documentation (sketches, handwritten cards, etc.) and the twist at the end of the story will keep many young bibliophiles content. Francisca Goldsmith
